

The Princess had one day permission to amuse herself with her companions in a neighbouring meadow. They were presently seen running by the side of a rivulet, pursuing butterflies, and gathering flowers.

When they had gathered a great quantity, they seated themselves under a shady tree, to make them into crowns, garlands, and nosegays; and while they thus amused themselves,

